

1. Go to the Learning Commons website:
(willistonstate.edu/Academics/Learning Commons)

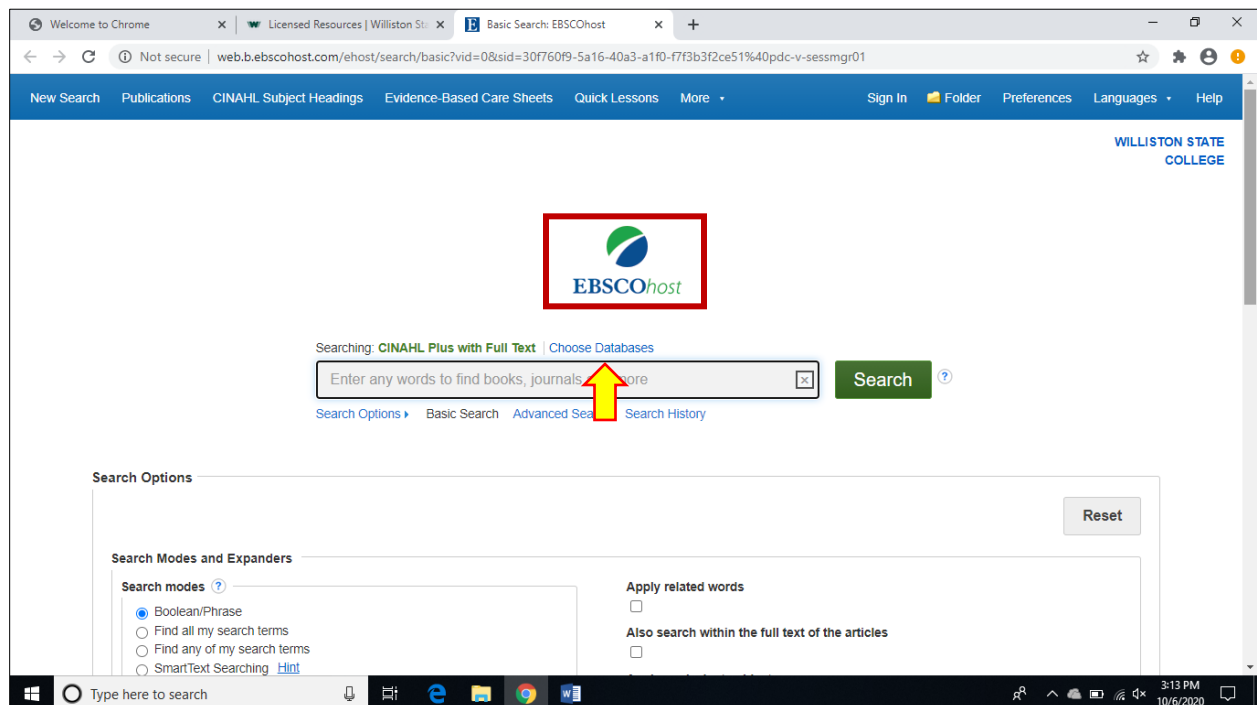

2. Click on “Licensed Resources” on the right menu

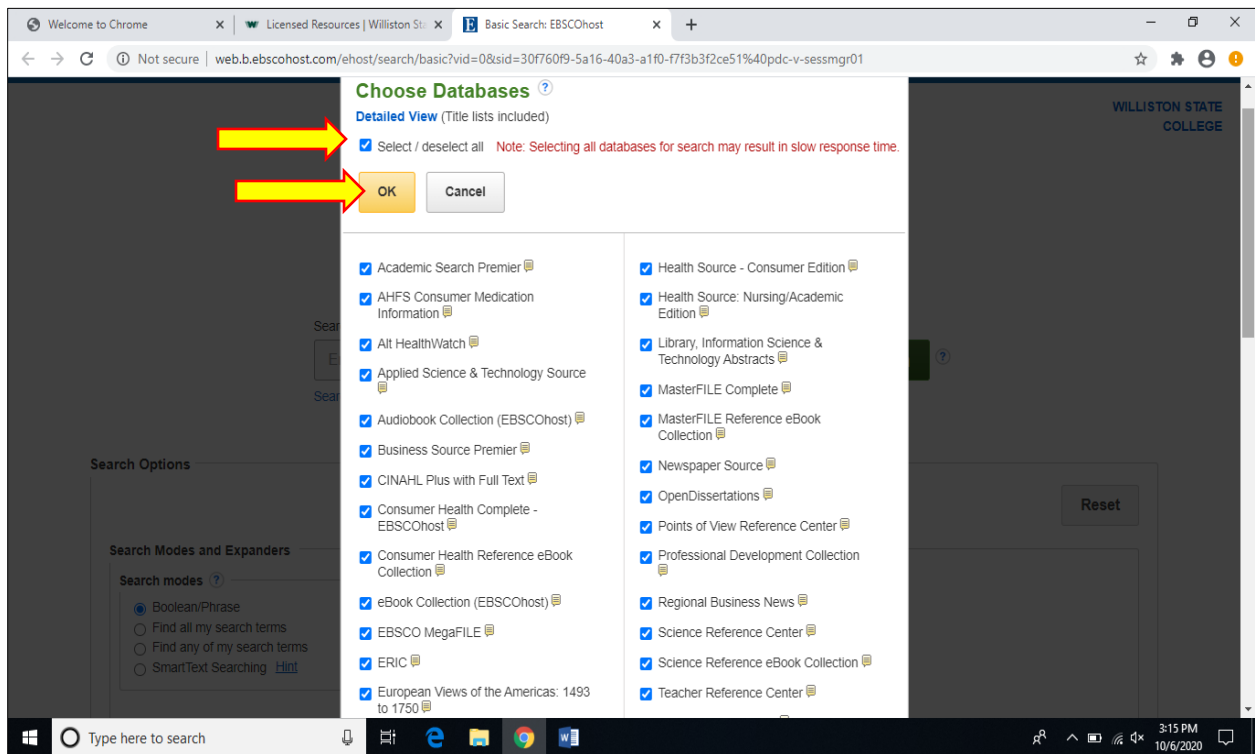

3. Find the database you want to search. For this example, we will search EBSCO (largest of our databases). Click on EBSCO accordion to open.
4. Click on any of the EBSCO databases to bring up the EBSCO Host search page

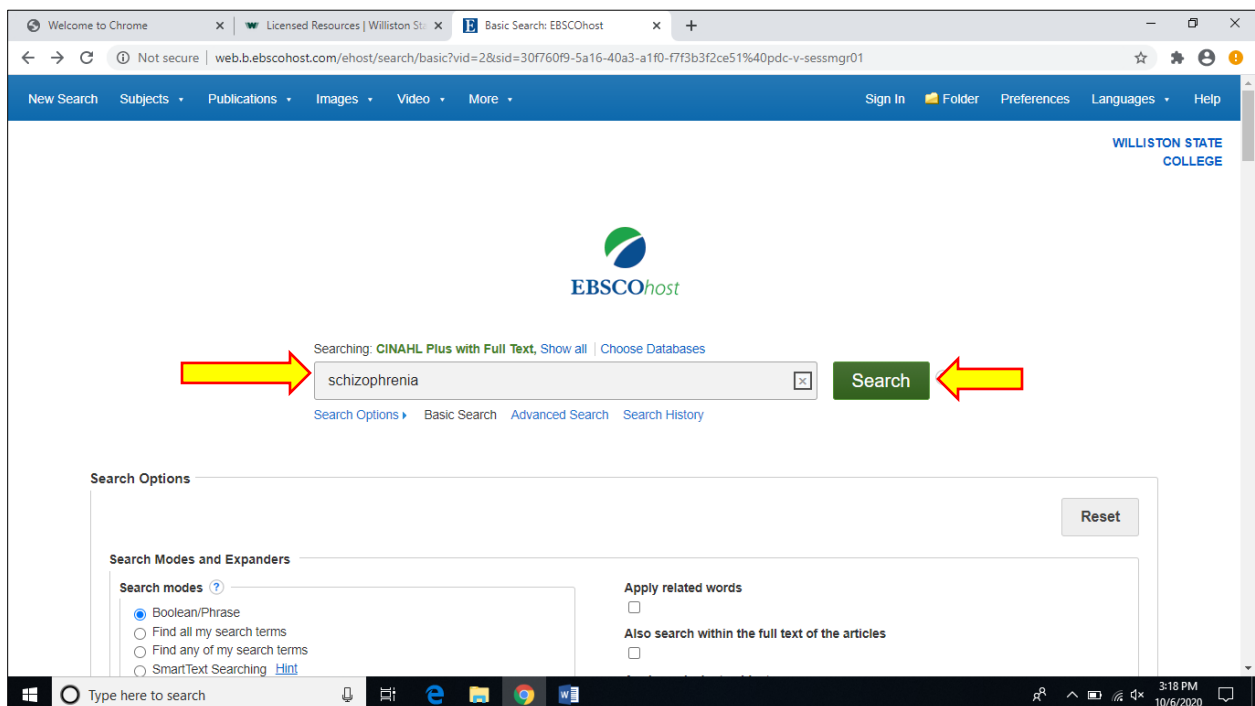

5. Click on "Choose Databases" above the search bar

6. Click in the “Select/Deselect All” checkbox to search all of the EBSCO databases at one time. Click “OK”

7. Type in your search terms into the search box or you can use the advanced search. Click on “Search” button

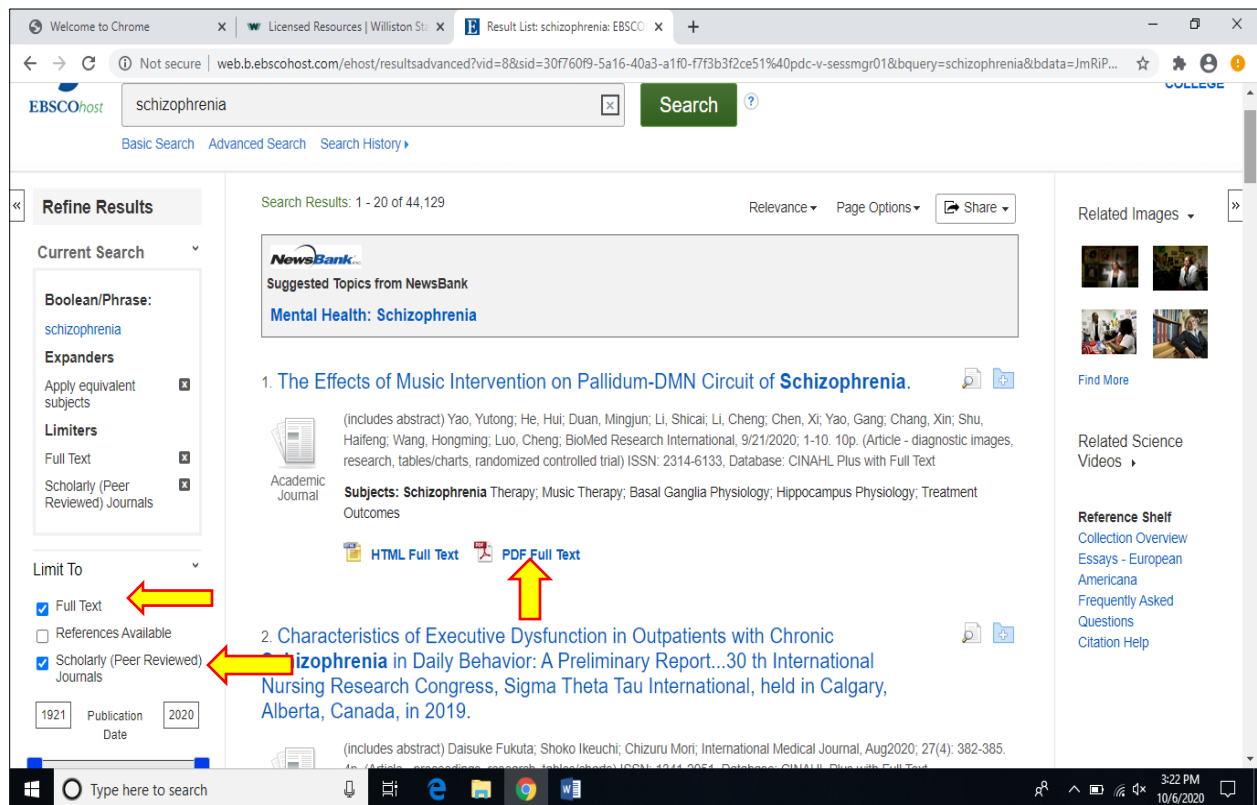

8. Your search results page will appear.

Here you can refine your results on the left to just “peer-reviewed (scholarly) articles” as well as “full text.” HOWEVER, this may still bring up some articles that have “Linked Full Text” notations. These articles will link you to the original source and will probably request payment to obtain the article.

Best practice would be to only look at articles that have “Full Text PDF” as they are detailed and downloadable and the best option. You can also download “HTML Full Text” however it may not include tables or graphics from the original article.

9. Click on the “PDF Full Text” icon to bring up the article.

10. Click on the downward arrow to download your article to your computer or onto a flash drive. You can also get the article citation here (always double-check the citation for accuracy!).
